PERSONAL

Comings and Goings of Local People and Others.

H. C. KUTZKAU has gone down to the coast to attend the big fight, CLAUDE A. HELLER, president of the Belmont, was a passenger for San Francisco on No. 23.

CURTIS LINDLEY, chief counsel for the Jim Butler litigation, went to San Francisco this morning.

D. C. ASPLAND, of the Tonopah & Tidewater, is in camp looking after the interests of his company.

MRS. A. B. NORTON, mother of Miss H. O. Jones, after a ten-day's visit with her daughter, returned to San Francisco this morning.

F. G. WATERHOUSE, general manager of the Nevada Telephone, Telegraph company, who has been on the coast for the past three weeks, returned to this city yesterday.

J. W. INGERSOLL, formerly of the Tonopah Extension mill, departed on this morning's north bound train for Whitcomb, Mont., where he goes to assume the management of a large milling plant at that place.

BUTLER THEATER.

At the Butler this evening will be shown the following programme: A two-reel special Pathe drama, "On the Altar of Patriotism," an intensely gripping drama of the civil war; a sellig comedy, "A Strenuous Scoop," and an Edison drama, "His Grandchild," featuring Mary Fuller.

Tomorrow Pathe's Weekly and a two-reel Lubin special, "Sealed Orders."

Friday a three-reel feature, "When the Earth Trembled," taken from the San Francisco earthquake.

ARGUED AND SUBMITTED.

The case of the Darrough estate against the Nevada Milling and Ore Purchasing company, wherein the appellant is suing to recover the sum of $4000 loaned to the respondent corporation, was argued and submitted to the supreme court Wednesday afternoon. Attorney Frank Pittman appeared on behalf of the appellant, with Attorney P. E. Keeler looking after the interests of the corporation.

MERCHANTS NOT TO BLAME

J. C. MORRIS DEFENDS THE LOCAL MERCHANTS.

"In justice to the local merchants," said J. C. Morris today, "I believe a statement from me at this time is needed, for if there are many people in Tonopah with the impression, as I heard one remark yesterday, that local merchants were asking too large a price for their wares, this I can say without fear of contradiction is not a fact.

"The party who made this remark yesterday was noticing the price that was placed on the stock of Mau's cash store, which I place on sale next Saturday morning at 9 a. m.

"Now, you have no right to compare the prices that I place on sale. This chance comes only once in a lifetime to get these kinds of bargains. I absolutely pay no attention to the original cost and mark each and every garment at prices I know will move them at once. When I throw the doors of the Mau's cash store open to the public on Saturday morning you can take it from me that the local merchants would find it hard to compete with the prices that I have placed on this stock. I have to clear out this stock in as short a space of time as possible, so be on hand and get the cream of the stock. Look out. Be on hand; let nothing keep you away; attend this big sale."

THE BELMONT ANNUAL REPORT

exclusively in cases of emergency. The examination of other mining properties, with a view to purchase, has been continued throughout the year. Preliminary examinations were made of fifty-seven properties of the 140 submitted, but in nearly all cases the prices and terms were prohibitive. Several were carefully considered after final examinations, and negotiations are being conducted for one which seems to meet all requirements.

Ore Reserves. Development completed during the fiscal year has exposed new ore and has further developed prospective ore in excess of the tonnage extracted during the same period.

The ore reserves in your property, as of February 28, 1914, consist of 257,623 tons of positive ore, of 59,815 tons of probable ore, and 103,676 tons of possible ore, or a total of 521,114 tons.

The Belmont vein ore reserves, while arbitrarily reduced as to areas of possible ore in the lower eastern portions (by reason of the lack of development of these blocks), and though later development has proven positive ore at the expense of probable ore, have yet "put on" in most satisfactory fashion. The same is true of the shaft vein ore reserves. Aside from these two, the most important deposits of the property, the reserves shown are in veins that, in large measure, are so high in grade as to be of much greater importance than is indicated by the stated tonnage.

During the year the mine has been in practically continuous operation, minor interruptions only having occurred. Hoisting has been carried on almost exclusively through the Belmont shaft, the exceptions being the use of the Desert Queen shaft, during the later months, for hoisting waste from development operations in the western part of the territory and for the lowering of ore from the sixth and seventh levels to the tenth level for transfer to the Belmont shaft. Until October 31, 1913, the Desert Queen shaft remained under lease to the Tonopah Mining company, of Nevada, since which time it has been jointly used by the Jim Butler Tonopah Mining company and this company.

Of 204,280 wet tons of ore delivered to the crusher bins, 27,465 wet tons of waste were sorted out, and of the resultant 176,815 wet tons (or 172,646 dry tons), 172,398 dry tons were milled and 346 dry tons were absorbed by ore stock on hand as of February 28, 1914. The net realization from Tonopah operations was $2,096,691.02.

The mill at Tonopah has operated continuously and very satisfactorily throughout the period. The total milling costs have been reduced from the $3.44 of the previous period (the seven months of the operation of this mill previous to the present fiscal year) to $3.049, a reduction of $0.395 per ton. Consistently high extractions have been maintained—94.45 per cent for the present period and 94.432 per cent for the previous period.

The new mill has, to date, treated 257,284 tons of ore of an average assay value of $21.57 per ton, at a total cost of $3,179 per ton and with a recovery of 94.443 per cent. The saving in freight, milling costs and recoveries, over the best results ever obtained with the Millers plant amounts to $1,9175 per ton. The saving on the ore treated to date amounts to $493,342.07, or to $24,777.55 more than the cost of the new plant.

Nearly five miles (25,696.5 feet) of development work, or more than double the amount completed in any previous year, was executed.

For the 4,251,746.48 fine ounces of silver in bullion, concentrates, and slag produced during the year, the average price received was 59.14 cents per ounce, the highest price received having been 62 cents and the lowest 57 cents. The average price received during the previous year was 61.92 cents, and had this last year's price prevailed during the present year, the total values realized would have been increased from $3,435,628.74 to $3,553,309.78, and the net realization would have been $118,280.99 higher.

The milling plant at Millers was operated continuously on custom ore purchased in the district, treating 48,088 dry tons in the period. The variable supply of custom ore was such as to interfere with the most profitable operation. The net realization from the Millers operation was $38,546.78.

The profit accruing from both the Tonopah and Millers operations (inclusive of miscellaneous profit) was $2,054,254.36.

New Mine Construction.

During the period under review the Belmont shaft was sunk from a point 1,559 feet below the collar to the 1,718-foot point. Large stations were cut on both sides of the shaft at the fourteenth and fifteenth levels (1,520 and 1,622 feet, respectively, below surface), and ore pockets of 130 tons capacity, steel lined and fitted with air-operated gates, were constructed below the stations. The shaft, for the last 228 feet (from a point 30 feet above the fourteenth level downward) has been enlarged and made a four-compartment shaft, the extra compartment being a small (12x60 inches in the clear) compartment in which are installed the various water columns and pipes, air lines and ventilation ducts, power cables, telephone and signal wires, etc., this practice leaving the manway clear and the result being a much better and more complete shaft at a nominally increased cost. The shaft as completed during the year was in fairly good ground, as compared with that above the fourteenth level and the "overcoat" shaft sets necessary between the thirteenth and fourteenth levels were dispensed with.

The mine workings adjacent to the Belmont shaft were piped with water lines for fire protection and for spraying ore chutes, the new state laws requiring such sprays. The pressure of water supplied from surface is too great to be controlled with ordinary pipe and fittings, and storage tanks were installed on the ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth levels for supplying water to the level immediately below, these tanks being supplied from the pump column.

BIG BAN

Red McGhee says:

Last fall when stove league chains were hot we used to hear an awful lot of fellows knock Big Ban. "Five hundred bucks a week!" they'd say. "It's nothin' short o' crime to pay that salary to one man." And then they'd gas about this snap. Work? No, he never did a tap—his job was one sweet dream. And so they jawed, an' whined ag' stowed until this Fed league rumpus brew'd an' started apoutin' steam.

The Fed went raiding left an' right, convinced the folks that they meant fight, and things began to hum. The big league managers were scared—afraid their stars would all be snared, their teams put on the bum. Then C. Webb Murphy ran amuck. It looked as if the old league struck a rock or sunken log. The stove league sat back 'gainst the wall quite sure that organized baseball was goin' on the hog.

Then Big Ban sat in for a hand and gave the world to understand he neer played to lose. He ordered Murphy from the game and Murphy sneaked, as nice and tame as if he had greased shoes. There wasn't any muss or fight, the whole thing happened over night—the boss said: "Go!" He went. The stove league hushed its anvil strain. It's satisfied to let Ban reign o'er baseball's firmament.

LOOKS "STANDING ROOM ONLY." From present appearances the "Standing Room Only" sign will be taken from the shelf and used at the Nevada theater this evening.

The advance sale of seats for "Capt. Racket" has been a record-breaker. It is likely that, when the curtain goes up at 8:30 o'clock, the Tonopah amateur players will be greeted by a crowded house.

One thing that has helped in advance to popularize this evening's performance is the low price of tickets. So-called professionals have come to Tonopah in the past, charged double the prices that are being charged for "Capt. Racket," and have packed oodles of money away with them while not giving half as much for the money as is promised by the Knights of Columbus, whose company of young Tonopah people will present Townsend's famous three-act comedy in a way that at least will not leave a dark-brown taste in one's mouth. The curtain will rise promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Copenhagen will hold an automobile exposition, open to manufacturers throughout the world, this month.
